Family Rosary Crusade Logo

The logo icon is created by the internationally acclaimed firm, Malcolm Gear Designers, the symbol is internationally designed to have a depth of substance - the symbol does not exhaust its meaning at first glance.

Extended Palette

Family Rosary Crusade "logotypes" are composed of the new symbol and wordmark. These two logotype configurations have been developed to ensure a versatile visual identity that addresses various situations. The logotypes have been carefully composed and should not be manipulated in any manner.

Symbol

The following is the authorized Holy Cross Family Ministries symbol in its approved color configurations.

PANTONE 871c

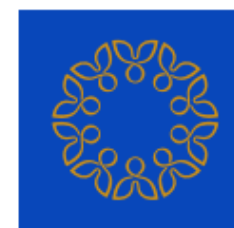

PANTONE 2728c

PANTONE -Black

PANTONE -White

PANTONE 1245c

Minimum Size

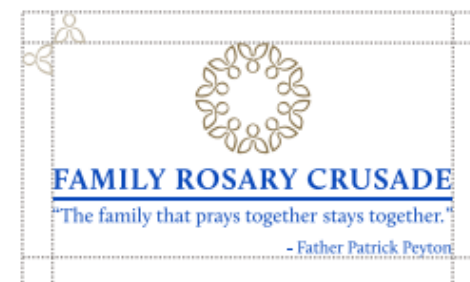

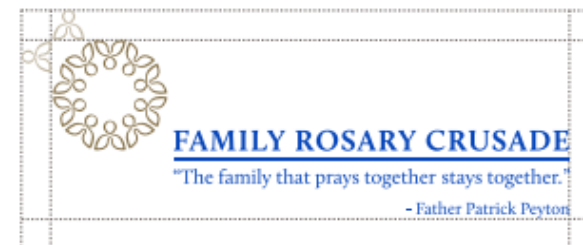

The symbol and logotypes should never be reproduced smaller than shown below. The symbol, when used alone, should never be smaller than 5/16" (.3125" or 7.94mm), and for the logotypes the height of the word "FAMILY ROSARY CRUSADE" should never be smaller than 1/16" (.0625" or 1.59mm). It is important to always make sure that the logotypes are sharp and legible.

Minimum Free Space

The construction of the wordmark and its relationship to the symbol have been carefully considered and should not be altered or rearranged in any manner.

In order for each logotype to achieve the desired impact and strength, it is recommended that a minimum clear space surround it, based on the height of the unit of the "prayer person", shown in blue in the diagrams below.

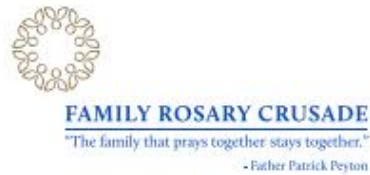

Proper Usage

The Family Rosary Crusade logotypes should always be displayed or reproduced in a clear and consistent way. The effectiveness of the Family Rosary Crusade brand relies on the disciplined use of the visual identity components for all communications, both external and internal.

The logotypes should never be stretched or distorted. Always be certain to maintain the logotypes' aspect ratio when moving, scaling, or changing its size. Do not change the colors of the logotypes not attempt to redraw the symbol. Never substitute different fonts or add new text to any of the logotypes. The logotypes should not be obscured or cropped. Do not add drop shadows or other digital effects. Do not add strokes or outlines to the symbol or any of the logotypes.

Do not stretch or distort the logotypes.

Do not resize or reposition elements of the logotypes.

Do not change, replace, or retype the font.

Do not resize or reposition elements of the logotypes.

Do not crop.

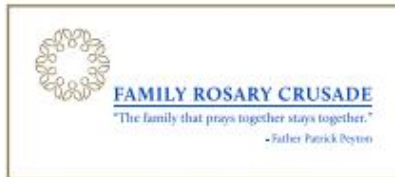

Do not add drop shadow or other digital effects.

Do not use background colors or tones that limit legibility.

Do not rotate or apply 3D effects to the logotypes.

Do not add borders or boxes to the logotypes.

Do not add strokes or outlines to the symbol or logotype.

Do not break apart the symbol or use individual part.

Brand Color

Primary Palette

The primary identification color for Family Rosary Crusade is blue Pantone 2728C and gold Pantone 871C. Process Black is also used for situations where color is not available or applicable.

The logotype may be printed in spot-color (specific to either coated or uncoated paper), or in four-color (CMYK) process (also specific to either coated or uncoated paper).

Hexadecimal (HEX) colors are provided for various uses for social media, web and digital use.

The consistent use of these colors will reinforce the identity. Pantone color swatches should always accompany any artwork given to a vendor.

Pantone 2728 Coated

Pantone 871 Coated

Extended Palette

To keep the visual identity program active and lively, an Extended Color Palette and an Extended Light Color Palette has been developed for print and collateral materials. Repeated use of these colors will provide visual continuity to Family Rosary Crusade's publications. Other colors may be added to this palette but contrast between the logotype and background must be adequate to ensure legibility. Pantone color swatches should always accompany any artwork given to a vendor.

Family Rosary Crusade Typography

The typography palette compatible with the logotypes features the sans serif typeface Whitney and the serif typeface Calluna, which each have several weights and styles. Please note, these fonts are considered to be support fonts, in that they are never used as logotypes, but are used as text in design communications such as publications, websites, social media posts/graphics, posters, signs, etc.

How to use it

Headline Title

The example on this post shows a good balance of how to use the typefaces, settings and palettes.

For headlines, use Calluna Bold, in primary colors (except black) and can also use negative (white) over primary colors, or when placed on a clear part of the image.

Supporting copy, such as subtitles and body copy, should flow normally. To allow for legibility and breathing space, post for Social Media will only use Whitney Book.

Family Rosary Crusade Stationery

Family Rosary Crusade stationery system has been carefully design to enhance the overall brand and communicate the new identity through its visual attitude. Shown below are the letterhead, #10 business envelope, mailing label and business cards.

Letterhead

The Letterhead layout is carefully setup in Adobe InDesign, and should not be changed. When typing the letter body, please use Times or Times Roman as described at right.

Print Specifications

Size: 8.5 x 11"

	FAMILY ROSARY CRUSADE "The family that prays together stays together." — Father Patrick Peyton	2.3" (59.14mm) top margin
Month, Day, Year
Name of Recipient Title of Recipient Street Address City, State, Zip Code
1.5" (38.1mm) left margin	Salutation: A piece of stationery is obviously printed for the purpose of typing a letter. Therefore, when the letter is about from the letterhead it is meaningless. It is my belief that a letterhead should not appear as a piece of advertising, but should subtly convey the information that is desired. A letterhead is one of the most used pieces of material that represents the company's personality, and therefore, a system directed to the secretarial staff should be established in the beginning of the process. The preferred typeface chosen for all correspondence is Times, 10 point on 13 point leading. This face is readily available and does not compete with the signature or secondary information and reproduces well on typewriters, laser prints, copies and fax sheets. When a larger type size is preferred, the letter may be typed in 11 point with 14 point leading. Letters are typed block style, single space between lines, double space between paragraphs. Do not use indents. Double space between the last line of the letter and the complimentary close and 4 return below the close to the typed signature. The left margin is 1.5 inches; the date begins 2.3 inches from the top. The typing width may vary, depending on the length of the letter. The maximum typing width is 5 inches (with a right margin of 0.5 inch). The minimum typing width is 3 inches (with a right margin of 1.5 inches). The bottom margin should be a minimum of 0.5 inch. When typing the envelope, the address begins 1.75 inches from the top and 4.875 inches from the left. Complimentary close: Typed Signature Title Company Name

Family Rosary Crusade Photography

Key Principles

When choosing an image of people, choose a photo that is well lit, bright, clean, and gives an insight into people's lives. These images must capture people with a strong sense of focus, determination, happiness, and hope.

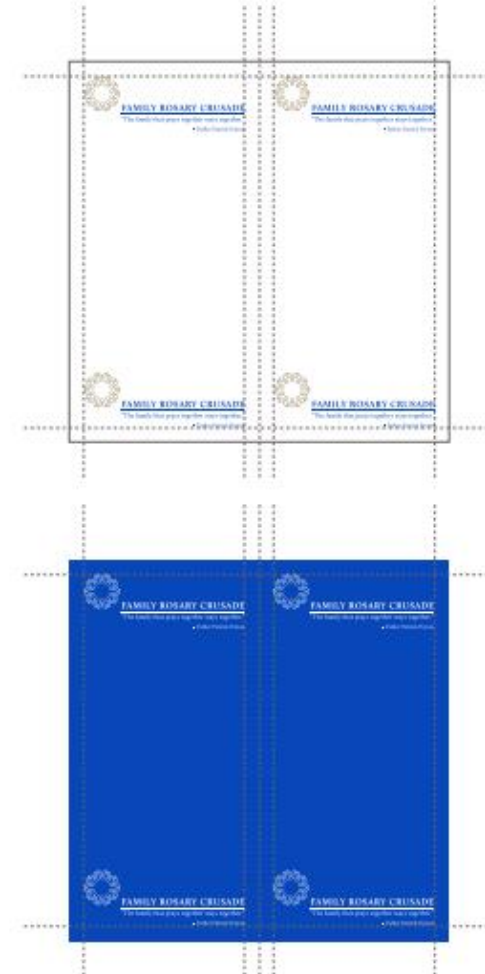

At least choose a photo with people with darker hair, if Asian race is not available.

Grid and Layout

Logo use

Background images, must be clear and light, it can also use silhouettes, but must incorporate colors that compliments the Family Rosary Crusade palette.

Logo must only be placed inside the grid, preferably at the four (4) corners when used for layout design.

Grid and Layout

Headline placement

There are no strict rules in placing the Headline other than, it must respect the grid lines.

Family Rosary Crusade Icon

How to use.

Icon can be used only as shapes inspiration, and only when properly cropped. It can also use the group icon when properly cropped, as shown on the samples above.

What doesn't work.

Don not use the group icon as an alement for design when it is not cropped properly, same as the single icon.

Composition and Techniques

Rule of thirds

The rule of thirds is one of the most basic composition rules in photography. It states that when composing an image, you should divide it into nine equal parts by drawing two vertical and two horizontal lines. Place the main elements at the intersections of these lines or along their path to create a balanced scene.

Frame within a frame

This can be done by using natural elements like trees or rocks, or even man-made objects like windows and doorways. It's called a frame within a frame because you're using the frame to draw attention to your subject. This technique helps create a sense of depth in your photos and makes them more visually interesting.

Leading lines

Leading lines are used to create a visual path for the viewer's eyes. This can be done using natural elements like rivers, roads, and pathways. It can also be accomplished by using man-made elements such as fences, walls, or staircases.

Using leading lines helps guide the viewer's eye to your subject.

Filling the Frame

For this technique, move in closer to your subject to strengthen your composition. Doing so allows the focus to fall on your subject, such as a person's facial expression, and on details that may not be readily noticeable by the naked eye. As a bonus, it will help you get rid of distracting elements in the background and may even give you interesting abstract patterns.

Unusual Point of View

Most images look so much better if we can show them from a point of view that's unusual.

Although we may look funny when we take our unusual point-of-view photos, the photos usually look more appealing, and most people would never guess that you were scraping your knees when you created the photo.

Shot Lists

What is a shot list?

Shot lists are simple reminders and guidelines of what pictures are must-haves. Everything else is supplementary. A shot list to a photographer is essentially a checklist of photos that you can mark off one by one to ensure the completion of documenting an event. Always complete the shot list!

Why use a shot list?

Without a shot list, a photographer is more likely to shoot blindly and fail to capture all of the essential images that are important to that specific client. Naturally, it is vital that a substantial amount of time and thought go into the creation of a shot list.

1. Details

Aspects that are unique to the event that has branding on it should be photographed. Examples include signs, programs, gift bags, and related collateral. These items are essential pieces of the event story that should be captured. Some events like dinner, fiests etc. must show images of food, and set-up. It is always better to explore with photos of the details of the event.

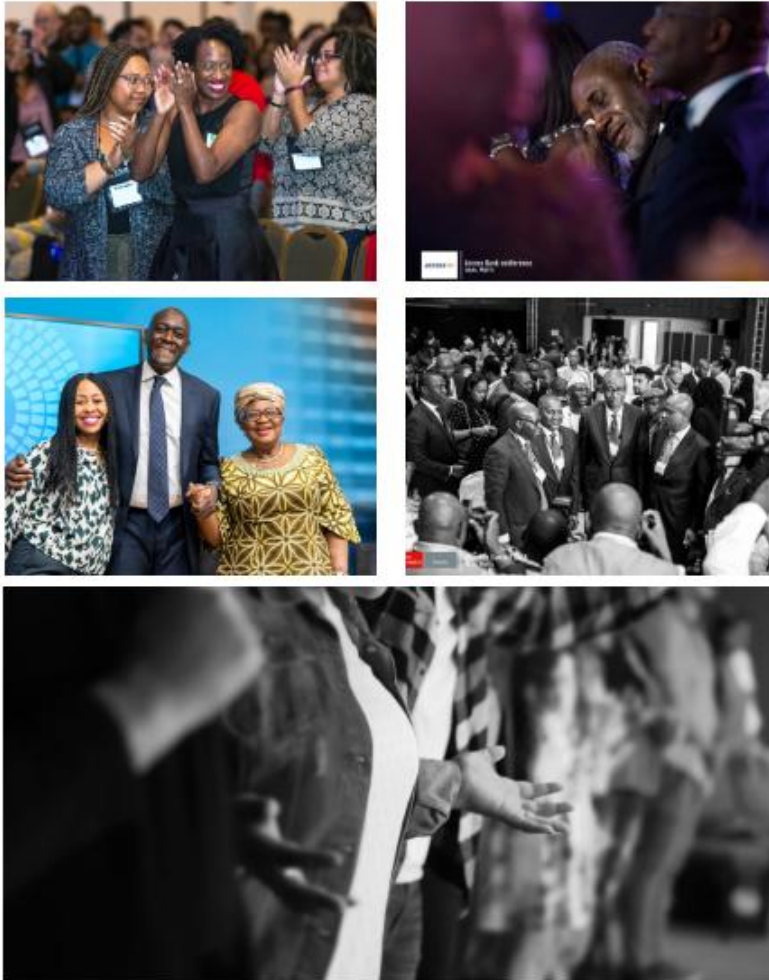

2. Venue Photos

Always remember to take a “before” shot before attendees arrive, and take a shot during the event when the venue is as full as possible. Additionally, try to get a photo of the venue with a long line of attendees waiting to get inside. Venue photos are ideal for event recaps showing how the event space is set up.

3. Attendees

Capture a wide variety of candid shots that encapsulate the vibe of the event. Try to capture their emotions during the event. Close up shots are fantastic, but remember to include wide angle shots to show the size and scope of the event.

4. Speakers and Special Guests

Photographing the speaker and special guests at an event is critical for several reasons, both practical and symbolic. It serves as a visual record of the event, showing the key moments. Capturing moments of speakers and special guests on stage or interacting with the audience demonstrates respect for their contributions.
